

Funari, P. ; Feitosa, L. ; Silva, G.. (eds) (2014) Love, desire and power in the Antiquity. Gender relations and the representations of the feminine. 1., ed. São Paulo: Fap-Unifesp.

The discussion on sexuality has become imperative to the desire to understand the numerous nuances that involve the life of human beings and the cultural and historical variations of the constitution of the body, affective relationships, and ways of instituting and managing sexuality. This volume deals with these issues and brings together scholars of Antiquity who work in different areas, from Archaeology to History, through Philology and Literary Studies, to encourage transdisciplinary reflections. The chapters focus on three civilizations, Egyptian, Greek, and Roman.