

Gold, B. (ed) (2012) A Companion to Roman Love Elegy, Wiley-Blackwell. Also available as an e-book and Blackwell Reference Online (BRO) collection.

This Companion explores the genre of Roman love elegy through essays on Catullus, Tibullus, Sulpicia, Propertius and Ovid, their Roman predecessors, and later writers influenced by their work. Many different critical approaches are employed, but feminist theory appears in many of the essays. The section on pedagogy contains articles on teaching Roman elegy, teaching Ovid's love elegy, and teaching rape in Roman elegy.
